

STYLE.COM REVEALS FIRST-EVER FASHION YEARBOOK AWARDS

NEW YORK, December 27, 2005 – STYLE.COM, the online home of Vogue & W magazines, has issued its first-ever fashion yearbook awards. Some of the highlights include:

- Most Theatrical: John Galiano. No contest here. Fashion's favorite impresario turned July's Dior couture presentation into one for the history books.
- Together Forever: Domenico Dolce & Stefano Gabbana. Never known as low key hosts, Domenico Dolce and Stefano Gabbana pulled out all the stops for their brand's 20th anniversary celebration during Milan fashion week.
- Class Cut-Up: Karl Lagerfeld. Whether palling around with Lindsay Lohan or snipping off the tips of his gloves to show off a treasure trove of Chrome Hearts rings, Monsieur Lagerfeld always finds new ways to have fun.
- Most Entrepreneurial: Stella McCartney for H&M. Not since that other British invasion have masses of women swooned like they did when Stella McCartney's collection for H&M arrived at the chain's New York City stores.
- Most "Overexposed": Tom Ford. For a designer who quit the runway early last year, we saw a lot of Tom Ford in 2005, from the Nude perfume launch to that nude photo.
- Most Popular: Gwen Stefani. Gwen applied the same technique in putting together the runway show for her spring 2006 L.A.M.B. ready-to-wear collection as she did on her smash solo album. It seems no one can resist Gwen's charm.

For the complete awards list log on <http://www.style.com/trends/features/year2005/>

STYLE.COM

STYLE.COM, a CondéNet publication, is the definitive fashion website, extending the editorial authority of Vogue and W magazines to the Internet. Offering comprehensive runway coverage with over 50,000 photos, authoritative trend reporting, the latest social, celebrity and fashion news and interactive forums on every aspect of the fashion industry, STYLE.COM offers visitors a total fashion experience. Based in New York, STYLE.COM launched in September 2000.

#